Smartphones have evolved to the extent that they can easily replace our PCs for day-to-day tasks such as email, video streaming, and web browsing. Regardless of your primary device, sooner or later, you will need to share files from your phone to a PC or vice-versa. There are plenty of different ways to share files from a PC to your Android phone, but the best method depends on the amount of data you need to transfer. Let's look at how you can easily share files from a PC to an Android mobile phone. 1. Transfer Files From Laptop to Phone Using a USB Cable If you have to transfer many files between your Android phone and PC, you should opt for the oldest and most reliable transfer method. It's still quick and easy to share files from a phone to a laptop, as long as you've got a compatible cable on hand. Plug your charging cable into the PC and connect it with your phone. Once you've got it set up, do the following on Windows or a Chromebook: Connect your phone. Tap on the notification Android shows labeled Charging this device via USB. Under USB settings, set Use USB for Transferring files or File transfer. That's it. A file transfer window will open on your computer, showing your phone (and SD card if you've got one). Then you can start copying your files across. The instructions are almost the same on a Mac, but you will need to install the Android File Transfer software first, or you can transfer files using OpenMTP instead. This method is suitable for copying large amounts of data. Try it when you want to transfer some movies or your entire music collection. It makes it easy to move files to your phone's SD card as well. The Google account you've set up on your phone gives you access to 15GB of cloud storage space through Google Drive. This gives you a convenient way to move files between your laptop and phone. You need to install the Google Drive app on your laptop. If you'd rather, you can use Dropbox or Microsoft's OneDrive, as they all work pretty much the same way. When you set up Google Drive, you need to sign in first. Then select Back up all file types and click Next. On the next screen, choose Advanced Settings at the bottom. Select Sync My Drive to this computer, then click OK. This creates a Google Drive folder on your computer. Everything in this folder will sync to and from your Drive account. So to upload files to your phone, just move them into the Drive folder. Open the app on your phone, and they'll be there after syncing. This is one of the fastest file transfer methods, but the main caveat to remember is that the files shown in your Drive app are not stored on your phone. If you try to open one, it needs to download first—a gigantic file can take a big bite out of your monthly data allowance. To get around this, you have two options for downloading the files you need to your phone. Select a file, and from the menu, choose either: Make available offline. This downloads the file for you to view offline within Drive. Any changes you make to it will sync next time you go online. Download. This saves a new copy of the file to your Downloads folder, and you can open it in any compatible app. However, any edits you make won't sync—you need to re-upload the file to your Drive account. A lack of free space is the main limitation of this solution. You can always set up an extra account, though, and it is possible to transfer files from one Google Drive account to another. Download: Google Drive for Desktop (Free) Emailing files to ourselves is hardly the most efficient way of moving data from a laptop to a phone, but we've all done it at one time or another. It works for quick sharing of files when you can't use any of the other methods. You're limited to 25MB attachments in Gmail. If you need something larger, check out WeTransfer. That allows you to send files up to 2GB for free, with no registration. Enter your email address on the website, then drag your files into the browser window and send. You'll then receive an email on your phone with a link to the files you may download. For security, files are encrypted and erased after seven days. You'll need a Pro membership if you wish to erase your files sooner or keep them up for longer. Alternatively, another easy way to transfer files between your Android device and PC is to use WhatsApp Web. This is an excellent way to quickly share images, documents, or even videos if you have a fast internet connection. One popular method for sharing files with WhatsApp is to make a new WhatsApp group with just one contact and remove them as soon as you create the group. Now that you're the only participant, you can use this chat to send and receive files from either device privately. To send files from your PC, you will first have to log in to WhatsApp Web from your PC and upload the required files in the newly created group chat. 5. How to Transfer Files From Laptop to Mobile Wirelessly You can share files between your phone and your laptop wirelessly, using either Bluetooth or Wi-Fi. When you've got a few smaller files you need to move to your phone, Bluetooth is an excellent way to go. It's pretty easy, too, once you've got it set up. To send a file over Bluetooth from your Windows 10 or 11 laptop to your phone, you first need to pair the two devices. Go to Settings > Devices and hit the toggle to turn on Bluetooth. Make sure it's also enabled on your phone. Now go to Add Bluetooth or other device > Bluetooth to start scanning. After a short delay, your phone will show up. Select it, then click Connect on your PC and Pair on your phone to complete the process. To share a file over Bluetooth, go to Settings > Devices > Send or receive files via Bluetooth > Send files. Then choose the file you want to share. For other platforms, the names of the menu options will be different, but the process is the same. First, you need to pair, and then you can share. Bluetooth is slower than some of the other methods we've listed, and it's best for smaller files and casual use. When you need to regularly move large amounts of data to your phone, you cannot beat Wi-Fi. As long as you connect your phone and laptop to the same Wi-Fi network, you can move files quickly and securely. To copy files over Wi-Fi, you need a particular app on your phone but nothing extra on your laptop. We recommend Snapdrop, which is free and requires no signup. It works with any platform—Windows, Mac, Linux, or Chrome OS—but is extremely convenient because you don't need to install it on those devices. Download and install the Android app from the Google Play Store to begin. Download: Snapdrop (Free) Launch the app on your phone, and open the Snapdrop page in a desktop browser. As long as both devices are connected to the same Wi-Fi network, they will detect each other. To send a file from your phone to your laptop or PC: Tap anywhere in the app on your phone. A file manager will open. Find and tap on the file or files you want to send. They will begin sending instantly. In the browser on your laptop, click Save when prompted to download and save the file. To send a file from laptop to mobile: You'll see an icon for your connected Android device in the middle of the Snapdrop window in your browser. Click this icon. Select the files you want to share, then click OK or Open. The files will begin copying over instantly. Tap Save in the app on your phone to save the files. More Ways to Move Your Data There are more methods to share files from mobile to laptop. You can use your SD card or a USB flash drive with an On-The-Go cable if your phone supports them. Or for ultra-teechie solutions, try using FTP with the Wi-Fi FTP Server app, or even utilizing Network Attached Storage (NAS). With this option, you share a single hard drive with all the devices connected to your network. For most people, the five methods outlined above are the best ways to move data from your laptop to your Android phone. Some are better for quickly sharing small files, and some excel at moving huge amounts of data. If you want to transfer large amounts of data, we recommend using a USB cable to transfer data. Otherwise, it is better to use one of the wireless sharing methods. The Cygnett 27,000 mAh USB-C Power Bank is an excellent product. Its beautifully designed, is reliable and well worth the cost. Roland Australia Capture that weird message, high score, or malfunctioning app in a snap. To revisit this article, visit My Profile, then View saved stories. To revisit this article, visit My Profile, then View saved stories. Sometimes you have to capture that crazy text you received, grab proof of your amazing high score in a game, or send the IT department a picture of what's going wrong on your device. Knowing how to take a screenshot can save you a lot of explaining. Every operating system has a built-in method of capturing the screen. Some even allow you to capture specific portions or grab a scrolling screenshot. We'll explain how. iPhone or iPad Android Phones Windows PC Chromebook Mac or MacBook To capture a screenshot on your iPhone or iPad, press the Sleep/Wake and Volume Up buttons simultaneously. On older devices with a Home button, press the Sleep/Wake and Home buttons simultaneously. When it works you will hear a capture noise if your sound is on and see a screenshot preview at the bottom left of the screen, where you can tap on it to edit, share, or delete. Screenshots only capture the visible portion of the screen but you can capture a whole document or webpage by tapping on the screenshot preview and selecting Full Page at the top right. Another way to take screenshots (as popularized by TikTok) on your iPhone 8 or later is to use the back tap feature. To enable back tapping, visit Settings then Accessibility. Under the physical and motor section, choose Touch. Turn on the back tap by scrolling down to the very bottom and choosing between two or three taps. In addition to screenshots, the back tap can be set up to lock the phone, start the flashlight, read texts aloud, and other actions. Tap firmly on the back of the phone where the Apple logo is located. There's a bit of a learning curve with what exactly registers, but it's another quality option if you get the hang of it. To capture a screenshot on an Android phone or tablet, press the Power and Volume Down buttons simultaneously. When it works, you will hear a capture sound and see a screenshot preview at the bottom left of the screen, where you can tap on it to edit or share. Some Android phone manufacturers offer a scrolling screenshot feature that can capture a whole webpage or message thread. They all have different names, but each involves taking a screenshot then tapping on a button when the preview appears. For example, on a Samsung phone, you should press the button with two arrows in a box to use Scroll Capture. Huawei has a similar option called Scrollshot, LG offers an Extended option, and OnePlus has Expanded Screenshot. If your phone lacks this feature, consider a third-party app like Screen Master. Windows Snipping Tool Photograph: Simon Hill To capture a screenshot on a Windows laptop or desktop computer, press the Print Screen keyboard key (usually abbreviated to Prt Scn or similar). If you only want to grab a screenshot of the active window, press the Alt and Print Screen keys together. Your captured screenshot is copied to the clipboard automatically and you must open Microsoft Paint, Photoshop, or whatever image software you use to paste it so you can edit and save it. If you just want to capture a portion of the screen in Windows 10 try pressing the Windows, Shift, and S keys together. You can then click and drag to highlight the bit you want and let go to capture it. In earlier versions of Windows you can do the same thing with the Snipping Tool, which is found by clicking Start and typing "snipping tool" in the search bar. Once again, the screenshot is copied to your clipboard for you to paste. To capture screenshots and automatically save them, press the Windows and Print Screen keys together. Screenshots are saved in a folder titled Screenshots in your Pictures folder. To capture a screenshot on a Chromebook, press the Control (usually abbreviated to Ctrl) and Show Windows (a rectangle with two lines to the right) keys together. To capture a portion of the screen, press the Shift, Control, and Show Windows keys, click and drag to highlight the bit you want, then let go to grab the screenshot. The screenshot preview should pop up at the bottom right, and you can copy or annotate it. To find screenshots later, click the Launcher button (the circle at the bottom left corner), then select Files and click Downloads on the left. To capture a screenshot on a Mac, press the Shift, Command, and 3 keys simultaneously. If you only want to grab a screenshot of the active window or a specific portion of the screen, press the Shift, Command, and 4 keys together. Press the Spacebar to capture an entire window or click and drag to highlight a portion of the screen, then release to capture it. The screenshots you take save to your desktop. To copy a screenshot to paste it into another app, you must also press the Control key when capturing. For example, to grab your whole screen you must press the Shift, Command, and 3 keys together.
